PLAN ELECTROLYSIS SURVEY OF DISTRICT

District and Utilities Officials
Would Provide Against Disintegration.

Plans for an electrolysis survey to determine the extent of the disintegration of underground metal construction in the District and provide for its removal were discussed at a meeting of officials of the Public Utilities Commission and the District and representatives of the public utilities at a conference in the District building today.

Capt. Julian L. Schley, executive officer of the commission, said the operation of the utilities is essential. The extent to which the commission may need the help of the utilities is difficult to see at present, he said, but the following assistance appears to be necessary: Information as to location and sources of power, access to plants of details of transmission and distribution systems, and other parts of the plants which may form part of the circuit of stray currents.

Records of existing cases of electrolysis in which any of the utilities' equipment is involved. General information as to the accessibility of exposed contacts with connected underground construction.

This information, the representatives of the utilities said, will be furnished. The conference was called at the request of the utilities, several of which have complained of electrolysis.

The Bureau of Standards and the electrical department of the District will aid in the survey. John P. Schrader will be in immediate charge of the work for the Public Utilities Commission.

Among those at the conference were Swift & Company's sales of beef in Washington, D. C., for the week ending Saturday, Jan. 8, averaged as follows: Domestic beef 10.67 cents—Adv.

Captain Schley, J. Kappeyne, engineer of the Public Utilities Commission; John P. Schrader, W. C. Allen, superintendent of the electrical department; H. C. Edley, of the electrical department; J. S. Garland, superintendent of the water department; P. G. Burton, H. B. Plankinton, and W. B. Beale, representing the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company; L. E. Sinclair, representing the Potomac Electric Power Company; G. A. S. Sinclair, of the Washington-Virginia Railway Company; H. Fitzhugh, electrical engineer of the Washington and Old Dominion Railway Company; C. S. Kimball, of the Washington Railway and Electric Company; and J. H. Hansen and R. H. Dalglish, representing the Capital Traction Company.
